LCYC camps start in June

LaGrange Communities Youth Centers added to the summer fun this year.

The art camp and drama camp will return along with a babysitting camp for local youth that would like to learn some useful skills and a conservation camp for older kids who want to get outdoors.

Founded in 2006, LCYC offers a variety of opportunities for LaGrange County youth, including after-school programs and summer camps. LCYC also assists with out-of-school suspension for area school districts.

The camps are a fun diversion when school is out. They are geared toward various age groups; for example, the art camp is for elementary-aged children and the conservation camp is for those entering seventh through 12th grades next year.

The new babysitting course, offered in conjunction with Parkview LaGrange Hospital, will be held on June 13, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Lakeland Intermediate School. Participants will learn childcare skills, the basics of first aid and CPR as well as some business tips. The course includes fun activities and role-playing exercises, says LCYC literature. The cost is $10.

Scholarships are available for those unable to pay the fee. Registration for all the camps is at lcyinc.org. Call LCYC at 463-0334 or email to info@lcyinc.org with questions. Deadline to sign up is one week prior to the camp. Registration for the drama and art camps is limited.

The summer conservation camp will be held July 18-22 at Pine Knob County Park, 2835 E. SR 120, Howe, in conjunction with LaGrange County Parks and Recreation Department.

LCYC Executive Director Jennifer Martin said she is excited about the new opportunity, which will feature Indiana Conservation Officers and parks Naturalist Leslie Arnold.

"They will do something different every day," said Martin. "It's just something to get them outside."

Among the programs will be hunting safety, wildlife identification and archery.

Art camp, overseen by Lakeland School Corporation teacher Amy Whited, is June 20-24, 9 a.m. to noon at Lakeland Intermediate School. This year's theme is Art From Around the World.

The program is for children in fourth and fifth grades. All supplies are provided.

Drama camp is taught by Lou Ann Homan of Angola and is for ages 11-16. Drama camp will be held July 25-29, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Lakeland Junior Senior High School.

The participants will learn acting and auditioning, voice and movement, improvisation and more. The cost is $25 per student. A live show, titled "The Gambler's Mourning," will be presented July 29 at 6 p.m. in the Lakeland Junior Senior High School auditorium.

"The show takes place in Brooklyn, New York at the Swing and Sway Supper Club in 1936," said Homan. "It is a who-dun-it mystery with a very colorful cast."

To top the summer off, LCYC is hosting a huge event on Saturday, Aug. 6, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Delt Church Park in cooperation with local law enforcement agencies. The officers involved will be dressed casually and participating in activities with youth in sixth grade and up.

The goal, said Martin, is to "provide a positive atmosphere and opportunities for the kids to enjoy."

The activities will include a seatbelt simulation and rides, as well as the chance to soak Chief Deputy Tracey Harker in a dunk tank.

Door prizes are being sought for the event. They can be dropped off at the parks department office at 505 W. 700S, Wolcottville. More information is available by calling 854-2225.

Local memories of Palm Sunday tornadoes included in new book

A book released this month by The History Press shares local, first-person accounts of deadly tornadoes that struck the area 57 years ago.

A section of the book dedicated to LaGrange County starts with the recollections of Middlebury mortician Rich Miller. Between the evening of April 11, 1965, and the following morning, 17 bodies from LaGrange County were taken to Miller's funeral home; eight of the people belonged to Shore Mennonite Church.

The author of "The 1965 Palm Sunday Tornadoes in Indiana," Janis Thornton, interviewed eight Shipshewana area residents at the Shipshewana Historical Society, and they shared their memories from the disaster.

They were among around 120 people from across the state interviewed by Thornton, who has written five other non-fiction books with a focus on Indiana. She is a member of The Authors Guild, the national and Indianapolis chapter of Sisters in Crime, Women Fiction

Thornton

Writers Association, the Indianapolis Writers Center and the Tipton County (Indiana) Historical Society.

"When people ask what drew me to this project," said Thornton, "my answer is simple: I love people, I love history, and I love telling powerful stories. Recording one of Indiana's most tragic natural events through the experiences of people who lived it makes for powerful storytelling, and I am immensely grateful for the opportunity to document how so many lives were touched that long-ago Palm Sunday night."

One hundred thirty-seven Hoosiers died in the Palm Sunday tornadoes, which struck six Midwestern states.

Rich Miller

Miller's story starts on a sunny Sunday afternoon, playing backyard basketball with friends.

Around 6 p.m., Goshen Hospital called him to pick up a family whose house had been destroyed by a tornado north of town. There were no ambulances at the time and hearses were used to haul the injured.

From there, the horror continued, with people from LaGrange County arriving throughout the night, bringing bodies of tornado victims. Miller learned eight of the 17 dead at his funeral home belonged to the Shore Mennonite Church and were to be buried in the church cemetery.

"I got the families together," Miller says in the book, "and had them meet me at one o'clock at the Shipshewana High School gymnasium. They were so helpful and wanted to do the funerals together. They said, 'We're like family.'"

The Shore Mennonite cemetery, across the road from the church, was in the tornado's direct path. When Miller learned every stone marker had been blown over, he asked gravestone companies in the area for help. "What was so amazing," he said, "by Thursday morning, they had every stone back on its base, and the community had cleaned up the cemetery. That was quite something and shows how people can work together."

Truman Miller

Truman Miller of Shipshewana kept his hardware store open the night of the tornadoes and handed out flashlights and supplies to police officers and rescuers.

Then he joined them. Miller's cousin Paul Mishler lived on the north side of Shipshewana and recalled when his daughter peered out the front window and yelled, "Look!" The mobile home across the street was in the air, he said, and made a complete turn before crashing to the ground.

Vietnam veterans welcomed home at Legion event

The LaGrange American Legion, 100 Industrial Parkway, LaGrange, will host a Welcome Home for Vietnam era veterans on Thursday, June 23, 4-7 p.m.

Those who served in the military from 1955-75 will be honored.

Veterans who attend the LaGrange County Welcome Home will receive the Indiana edition of "Vietnam War 50th Commemoration: A Time to Honor," published last year by Remember My Service Productions.

"Half a century has passed since the Vietnam War, and 50 years of novels, films and music have dramatized and mythologized the controversial conflict. But this book approaches the war in a uniquely personal way, focusing on individual stories of the men and women from every state and service who fulfilled their duty during the Vietnam War. Their day-to-day experiences are heartbreaking, raw, detailed – and sometimes even humorous," says an introduction to the book.

Veterans who attend the Welcome Home in LaGrange will also be given a Department of Veterans Affairs lapel pin and a complimentary meal.

The event is open to all area Vietnam era veterans; one need not be a member of the American Legion. LaGrange County Veterans Service Officer Allen Connelly and a district officer will be on hand to provide up-to-date information about state and federal benefits programs.

The United States began observing the 50th anniversary of the Vietnam War on Memorial Day 2012. It will continue through Veterans Day 2025.

Around 2.7 million Americans served throughout the years of the Vietnam War. More than 58,000 names are etched on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. More than 1,500 soldiers are listed as missing and unaccounted for.

Another 153,000 Americans were wounded in the conflict and the Veterans Administration recognizes that health issues and disabilities may result from exposure to Agent Orange, says information provided by the VA.

According to a VA survey, around 500,000 of those who served in Vietnam suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder, and rates of divorce, suicide, alcoholism and drug addiction were markedly higher among veterans.

Welcome Home Vietnam Veterans is dedicated to serving the veterans of the Vietnam War and their families. It has an office at the Indiana Veterans Center in Indianapolis, a Facebook page and a web site at whvv.org.

Tornadoes

Houses, farms, utility poles, businesses – everything was smashed by the storm. The wounded were taken to Goshen Hospital or LaGrange County Hospital, which several survivors describe as looking like a “war zone.” The junior high school was turned into a temporary hospital and a temporary morgue was created at LaGrange Youth Center. More than 100 LaGrange County people were injured.

Unforgettable scenes

Indiana State Police Officer Richard Wire explained the scene at Rain-bow Lake, the hardest hit area in the county. Wire arrived to help the wounded and while he was there, a second tornado swept overhead, eventually touching down in Mongo.

The Howe and Ontario areas were hit too. Thornton talked to Mary Jane Friend, whose parents, Elva and Nona Nelson, lost their home to a tornado.

Louise Leisey Poier remembers an Indiana State Police Officer coming into the movie theater in La-Grange, where she and her friends had been startled by the abrupt end to the show and the lights coming on.

Poier lived only a few blocks from the theater, behind the hospital. She was home in just five minutes, long enough to grow concerned about the menacing sky.

“The skies were very dark,” she said, “but the tornado didn’t hit La-Grange. However, I could hear the sirens for hours as the medics came to the hospital.”

Community disaster

Christine Cross Finland was a 16-year-old junior at Lakeland High School when the storms hit.

Her most “horrifying memory,” she said, came the next morning as she rode with her mother along U.S. 20 toward Shipshewana. “The closer we got to the Shore Lake area and Shore Menno-nite Church,” she said, “the more horrific the damage. The road was littered with debris, including dead farm animals, furniture, overturned automobiles, children’s toys and broken farm equipment ... For miles and miles, everything was gone,” she said, “houses, barns, trees. Everything. I can still see it all in my mind.”

She recalls the devastation to the Amish community.

“Amish people came from Ohio and Pennsylvania to help us prepare and serve sandwiches, lemonade and homemade pies that were donated from outlying communities,” Finland said. “And vanloads of Amish workers arrived from hundreds of miles away to help their friends, relatives and strangers rebuild.”

Claudene Holtz was only 8 years old on Palm Sunday 1965, but clearly remembers seeing a “black, twisting giant coming.”

Thornton talked to Robert Smith, who was 17 at the time and living near Woodruff. An Explorer Scout, he helped clear the debris for days after the tornadoes.

She also documents memories of Teresa Koontz Price, who lived on Witmer Lake with her family. The storm blew violently through the Wolcottville area, Koontz remembers, but the homes where she lived were unscathed.

The next day, the family drove through the Amish areas of the county to see what they had endured. “And that’s where we saw the horror,” she said, “dead animals, a horse blown into a tree, cars on the roofs of barns. They got the brunt of it.”

Thornton traveled throughout Indiana gathering stories from the 1965 Palm Sunday tornadoes. The book is available at major bookstores and online booksellers, as well as on Thornton’s website, www.janis-thornton.com.
